Chachere Apartments, a new eight-unit luxury apartment building in the final stages of completion in Dayton is evidence of the growth pressure being felt as the U.S. Steel and other plant constructions progress in the Trinity River area.

Builder of the elaborate apartment project seen here is L.J. Chachere, Dayton feed dealer. He is also building four brick rental homes across town. He came to Dayton as an agriculture teacher at Dayton schools in the early 1950s. These apartments will be ready for June occupancy.

Antique furniture – the real thing, that is – is an interest of growing scope across the nation in recent times. Items in many homes that were lightly regarded till now have suddenly taken on new value. The five-piece curly walnut bedroom set owned by the late E.F. Gaston and Mrs. Gaston, seen here, is typical. It is a century-old heirloom in Mrs. Gaston's family, old settlers in Marshall, Texas. The bed is canopied, and the whole thing is in mint condition. Today's eight-foot ceilings are not adequate for these fine pieces.

Mr. Gaston was postmaster in Dayton for a quarter-century and served as city judge before his recent death.
